Editor's note

While we are working on firming down all the details on Sime Course with the authorities, we have also started looking into what can be done with the golf course to make it safer and more conducive for both our Keppel members and the public at large to play.

Though we are practising safe distancing measures, we have organised events like the Fa Cai Cup and the Ladies Fun Game in February. We have also started the Junior Elite Training (JETs) programme to help our Keppel Juniors reach new golfing heights.

Moving forward, our Annual General Meeting (AGM) has been scheduled for April 26, 2021. More details will follow when the official notice for AGM goes out next month, so keep an eye out!

In the meantime, I would like to urge all members to continue practising personal hygiene and observing safety measures, to help keep all who visit the Club safe!

Best regards,

Generations Coming Together

Keeping Club members safe in a pandemic

On Feb 9, 2021, Keppel Club was informed by the authorities of a COVID-19 positive imported case who had visited the Club's gym on two occasions, on Jan 21 and 25, 2021. These visits took place after he had served his Stay Home Notice, and he was not showing any symptoms during his visits.

MOH advised that none of our staff or members had been identified as close contacts, and that there was no need for any quarantine of staff or visitors. In fact, more than 14 days had lapsed since the case had visited the gym.

The gym is routinely disinfected, and a deep cleaning was done at the end of January. In order to be even more certain of our members' safety, the Club also engaged one of MOH's licensed companies to provide a thorough disinfection of the premises the very night that we had been informed of this COVID-19 positive case.

We would like to take this opportunity to remind all members to continue practising good personal hygiene and adhere to all safe management measures and wear your mask at all times except when eating or drinking to reduce the transmission of viruses. If you are feeling unwell, do stay home and rest, and see a doctor promptly if you have any symptoms of acute respiratory infection, as well as fever and loss of taste and smell.

Planning for Sime Course's renovation

The Golf Course Upgrading Task Force clarifying details with one of the potential construction management candidates for the golf course upgrading project.

Work is in progress to look into the required upgrading works for Sime Golf Course in the coming months. Captain Luo Yi and Vice-Captain Anthony Maniam are tasked with two other members of the Golf Course Upgrading Task Force (GCUTF) team to look into the improvement works for Sime Golf Course.

The two other members of the GCUTF are Professor Patrick Loh who is a practising plant scientist, and Mr David Phua, who heads a land surveyor company. Professor Loh will be lending us his expertise on agronomy, while Mr Phua will be able to advise us on matters like course drainage.

There has been plenty of feedback on the current Sime Golf Course from members and the task force is aware of the situation. Firstly the GCUTF has identified the following priority on the golf course upgrading works.

1. Greens and surrounding areas– Plans to renovate the existing greens and to returf with new grass species to facilitate more enjoyment for our golfers.

2. Tee Boxes – There is a need to enlarge the Sime tee boxes in order to facilitate the expected higher golf traffic when Keppel Club takes over. The tee boxes will have an increased tee position and adds more relief to the turf grass and sustainability.
3. Green side bunkers will be improved to give better drainage and visibility to play.
4. Safety – An overall study into the safety of play is a critical necessity for both Bukit and Sime golf courses.

The work is not as straightforward as renovating the golf course. “The preservation of the heritage of Sime Golf Course, including its natural areas of outstanding beauty needs to be jealously guarded,” Professor Loh fervently expresses.

Indeed, the golf course task force prioritises finding ways to preserve the sensitivity and enhance the sustainability of Sime’s well-embellished environment, especially with regard to its flora and fauna.

Ladies Fun Game Feb 2021

Ushering in a cheerful atmosphere

Striking a pose and then going on to have a great game is no problem!

The afternoon of Feb 5, 2021 saw our greens brightened by the wide smiles of the lovely ladies of Keppel Club, gathered for the Chinese New Year ladies fun game.

While we were not able to hold a buggy decorating contest like in previous years, the ladies had no problem ushering in a cheerful atmosphere as they enjoyed an afternoon of fun golf. Many came decked out in bright reds, pinks, and floral patterns, with some going the extra mile of welcoming the "niu" year with ox headbands.

Above all, we are heartened to see that all attending enjoyed a good game of golf with the cheerful and friendly atmosphere that is synonymous with Keppel Club.

In sync with pink for these ladies.

Ox headbands and bright colours, many of our ladies easily added colour to Keppel Club's greens.

Fa Cai Game 2021

Ringling in a prosperous new year

Members registering for their flights in the early morning, and getting their goodie bags which included oranges, golf balls, a CNY themed mask, and a toto ticket for the next day's draw!

The third day of Chinese New Year was off to a sunny start with this year's rendition of the Fa Cai Game. Unlike previous years, there was no dinner due to COVID-19 celebrations, but members were all smiles regardless as they enjoyed a fun game of golf under the pleasant sunny and windy weather.

Following tee times instead of a shotgun start to better allow for social distancing during the tournament, member response to the annual game was overwhelming, with fully booked flights in both the morning and afternoon sessions.

Amongst the prizes this year was a weekend golf game on a date of the winner's choice, a prize that will surely be well-appreciated given the COVID-19 restrictions for golf booking.

A big congratulations to all winners at this year's Fa Cai Game, and wishing our golfers a great year with good health ahead.

Keppel JETS Trial 2021

Helping our talented and dedicated Keppel Juniors grow

Listening carefully to instructions as they were being briefed on the exercise to follow.

The evening of Jan 16, 2021 brought with it a buzz of nerves and excitement as 15 of our Keppel Juniors gathered at the driving range to trial for the Junior Elite Training (JETs) programme. During the trial, many of the juniors showcased a good mix of experience and potential, with Golf Line School coaches noting that several displayed a serious amount of clubhead speed for their age.

Coaches Greg Anketell and Adrian Tan also noted that results for the short games skills test could stand to be better, and have made plans to adjust the JETS training programme accordingly to give the juniors more short game and course practice.

The juniors have been split into two different squads to train under the two coaches, and the programme will run on a weekday and a weekend each week for eight weeks. Weekdays will see the juniors sharpening their skills under the tutelage of the coaches at the driving range and the practice green, before they head out for a 9-hole game on a weekend evening.

To give them more opportunities to practice, Keppel Juniors in the programme are also given an additional 500 balls at the driving range, on top of what is used during the practice sessions.

Watching the example in between their skills test.

Junior Convener Eugene Heng has set the two coaches a goal of reducing the juniors' handicap by one to two points by the end of the eight week programme, as well as assessing their potential. At the end of the eight weeks, the juniors will once again be assessed, with the top performers being picked up for an elite team that will undergo further training.

If there are any juniors who wish to join, parents are encouraged to contact Izan at izan@keppelclub.com.sg, and we will see how further arrangements can be made.

Supporting the growth of our Keppel Juniors

Through the years, Keppel Club has worked together with the golf school to create and continue the junior programmes which help our Keppel Juniors solidify their golf foundation and build up their skills. Dedicated to continuing this tradition is the current Junior Convener, Mr Eugene Heng.

Despite the COVID-19 pandemic impeding plans for the junior golf programme last year, Mr Heng worked together with our golf team in order to kick-start the junior programme amidst heightened restrictions in Phase 2. Last year, the team's efforts saw the junior programme running from Nov 23, 2020, to Dec 20, 2020.

This year, Mr Heng and the golf team have planned a more ambitious programme in the hopes of developing an elite team that will be selected after eight weeks of working closely with the coaches to develop their skills and strengthen their weak points.

"Most importantly, I tell the kids that they should enjoy themselves. We're very happy that the parents of our Keppel Juniors are very supportive," he shares.

Mr Heng is also working on ways to bring back the Junior Camp and Junior Tournament which ran annually each June before the COVID-19 pandemic. He hopes to firm up the details and get approval from the Singapore Golf Association (SGA) soon.

Above all, Mr Heng encourages parents whose children wish to join the Keppel Junior programme to reach out, and to support their kids in being a part of this programme.

Repairing ball marks the right way

Recently, there has been an increase in the number of players who have missed out on repairing their ball marks, or have done so improperly. Remember that repairing your ball marks is essential to helping us keep our greens in good condition, especially when rainy weather softens the soil.

Step 1

Insert your divot repair tool at a 45 degree on the edge of the depression.

Step 2

Push the edge of the ball mark towards the centre in a gentle motion. Do not use the tool as a lever to push the ball mark back up to the surface; this tears the roots and kills the grass.

Step 3

Do this around the rim of the ball mark. Once you've done so, gently pat down the repaired ball mark with your putter to smooth the putting surface.

Singapore Food Culture

Fish head curry

With our love for spices and curry, it is hardly a surprise that fish head curry is one of the most popular dishes in Singapore. Whether served with the milder spices of Chinese curry, or with the extra kick of a sweltering Indian curry, there is something about this iconic dish that adds flavour to your day.

Made by stewing a fish head in spicy curry alongside an assortment of vegetables, especially eggplant and ladyfinger, this dish is a fusion of two cuisines—Chinese and Indian—an apt representation of Singapore's melting pot of culture.

Some stories tell that the dish first came about during the 1950s, at an Indian restaurant that used to serve fish head, owned by M.J. Gomez. One of the frequent customers, a Chinese businessman, paired the fish head with a spicy, tangy curry with a variety of vegetables, and it became an almost instant hit.

Regardless of the accuracy of this story, fish head curry is a classic example of how fusing elements from different cuisines can create delectable experiences. If you have a hankering for fish head curry, our very own Tee Top serves the dish on weekends and public holidays, so why not drop by and satisfy your cravings?

We invite members to share their anecdotes by sending their stories to:

Painting the coastline with colours Cinque Terre

Riomaggiore, found on the eastern end of the Cinque Terre. – Wasin Pummarin © 123RF.COM.

By Helen Neo, Newsletter Sub-Committee member

Cinque Terre is a rugged coastline on the Italian Riviera and consists of the five beautiful hillside towns; Monterosso, Vernazza, Corniglia, Manarola and Riomaggiore. The string of centuries old seaside villages are connected by footpaths, for example the famous sentiero azzurro which connects all five villages.

Each of the five towns of colourful houses and vineyards clings to steep terraces. Harbours are docked with fishing boats and these towns traditionally turn out seafood specialties along with the Liguria region's famous pesto sauce. Its land and culture are so unique that it has been protected as a national park and designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Manolara by night. – Martin Molcan © 123RF.COM

This site is different from visiting traditional must-see historical man-made sites such as the colosseum, artworks, churches, palaces, museums and castles. Here, it's the landscape, the ambience, beauty and fresh air that excites our senses by walking the breathtaking paths along the cliffs, pausing over gelato in a café which we couldn't resist despite the cold winter, surrounded by candy-coloured houses and capturing pictures of Italy's best views and just absorbing the Old World charm.

Out of the five towns, we started in the largest town—Monterosso al Mare. It is less photogenic than the other four, but the only one with a sizable beach. In the old part of the town, near the train station, we came across the 14th-century Loggia del Podestà and the parish church of San Giovanni Battista, whose campanile was built as a Genoese watch-tower.

We walked along the tracks and took the train to Manarola, after which we claimed a table in one of the little restaurants in the piazza where we savoured freshly caught seafood with a view over the miniature harbor. Above, the 1338 Gothic church of the Natività di Maria Vergine (also called the church of San Lorenzo) had a beautiful rose window of Carrara marble.

Opposite the church was its freestanding bell tower and a 16th-century watchtower. Although few tourists were there to see it, we were told that during December and January, more than 10,000 lamps and 200 figures light the surrounding hillsides in what may be Italy's largest Christmas illumination.

At the eastern end of the Cinque Terre, Riomaggiore is the easiest to reach. The 19th-century Italian artist Telemaco Signorini often stayed here and cast the spotlight on the village through his paintings, making it the first of the five to be "discovered" by tourism. To this day, artists and photographers are still drawn to this village for its landscape and beauty.

Golfing with our animal companions

The animals, flora, and fauna that can be found around Keppel Club's clubhouse and golf course are as much a part of our heritage as our members. Coming down to the golf course and encountering a monitor lizard ambling along or going for a swim, or catching a glimpse of the white-bellied eagle soaring through the sky makes for a different experience every game, especially for nature buffs.

Club members having photo adventures and admiring nature around the golf course.

Parakeets having a feast.

Otters lounging on the greens.

Some of these animals are well known to older Keppel Members, like the white-bellied eagle that has made its home at three different Albizia trees over the years—unfortunately, two of its older homes were hit by lightning, and it had to relocate to the third Albizia tree, which still stands today. Apart from that, members might also be familiar with the playful parakeets that tend to hang around Holes 9, 10 and 11, darting around as you enjoy a good game of golf.

Even powerful birds of prey must rest—and what better place to do that than in our golf course's Albizia tree?

With plenty of sun and pools of water, reptilian friends have a great time sunbathing or even cooling off on our course.

Not all animals that you can find around the course are of the cute and feathery variety. You'll also find our reptilian friends like the monitor lizards, some over three meters in size. Black cobras are also commonly sighted around the course.

The family is constantly growing too, with otters having recently made themselves at home around our course. You might notice them in the middle of your game, or even when you dine looking over the golf course.

While Sime has plenty of flora and fauna to take in as well, we will definitely be missing some of the sea birds and animals that are unique to Keppel Club's golf course when we move. While we can't take these animal friends with us, we can at least take the memories and some beautiful photos.

Flashback

Generations coming together. Truly, the family has always been a part of Keppel Club's DNA. Introducing Keppel Juniors to golf and introducing programmes that help them sharpen their skills is something that has persisted through many years, as has encouraging our juniors to take part in Club events and tournaments.
